Social trauma course

- Social trauma is a type of psychological trauma caused by events in which the behavior of one large social group leads to the traumatization of another large social group (Hamburger, 2018).
- Social trauma influences:
 - The physical and psychological health of the traumatized individual
 - The identity of the traumatized individual
 - Social environment of the traumatized individual
- Due to the complexity of its mechanisms and its wide reaching consequences and manifestations, the course covers the topic of social trauma from different areas of psychology including developmental, social and clinical psychology, covers the perception and memory related topics of social trauma and also discusses the ethical considerations and methodology of research in social trauma.
- All students who have met the conditions for passing this course specified in the summerschool general instructions will receive a certificate that they have successfully completed the Elective Course Social Trauma, with 5 credit points (ECTS).

Important notice about time zones!

As the summer school is being held online with participants each in their home country, you should be aware of time differences between countries i.e. that different participants will be in different time zones.

Bosnia-Herzegovina, Germany and Serbia use Central European Summer Time or CEST for short. Turkey and Bulgaria use the East European Summer Time or EEST for short which is +1 hours compared to CEST.

Time in this program is Central European Summer Time (CEST), used in Bosnia & Herzegovina, Germany and Serbia. For East European Summer Time (EEST) used in Bulgaria and Turkey, please add +1 hour. That means that if you are located in Turkey or Bulgaria, Registration & Welcome will start at 15:00 (not at 14:00 as listed in the program), Introduction to social trauma lecture will start at 16:45 etc. If you are located in Turkey or Bulgaria, always add +1 hour to the time references in the program.
